The Stolen Kiss.

With blue eyes closed, and head thrown back,
Within the easy chair sat Kitty.
Thought I, "If now a pair of gloves
I may not win, 'twill be a pity!"
But as I softly reached her side,
The red lips parted with a murmur;
And oh, what joy! my name she breathed,
Within my heart grew hope still firmer.
"Dost love me, Kitty?" whispered I;
And soft in sleep came back her answer,
"I love thee not!" I stood aghast,
Till love urged, "Kiss her while you can, Sir!"
But ah! the blue eyes unclosed,
And glanced at me with mirth o'erflowing,
Thought I, "I'll let her think a while
That I've heard something worth the knowing."
Then, drawing near, I slyly said,
"Fair maid, your dreams have well betrayed you."
"For shame!" cried she, "to steal my thoughts,
And get my sleeping tongue to aid you!"
All penitent, I humbly said,
"But ah! the secret in my keeping
Has made me sad!" She answered low,
"One never tells the truth when sleeping!"

Selected Story.

The Rush-Seller at Rouen.

The quaint old town of Rouen lay glittering in the early sunlight of an autumn morning—an autumn morning, clear, crisp, sparkling with just a suggestion of winter in its bracing atmosphere. Every spire and tower and globe in the old town was a flame with splendor; every sail on the bosom of the Seine seems touched with unwonted brilliancy; and the river itself, lasping in drowsy waves upon its sunny shores, flashed in every wave and bubble like molten gold.

A royal morning and a royal day in Rouen. In the newer and more fashionable parts of the town, near the public garden, gay equipages rolled along; and along the Rue de l'Imperatrice gay ladies sauntered and fluttered, and gathered in little chattering bevies, like flocks of bright plumaged birds. Sounds of stirring music filled the air—snatches of merry songs, and bursts of happy laughter. At intervals, in a patient, mournful monotony, came the cry—"Rushes, rushes for sale—who'll buy?" But no one seemed to hear or notice. The busy crowd bustled onward; and the rushseller stood patiently in the sunlight lifting his poor, sightless eyes to the sky; while at his side, shy and pitiful as some little motherless bird, clung his little half-clad granddaughter.

"Rushes, rushes—who'll buy?" But nobody bought. The noon tide waned, and the evening shadows began to lengthen. The old man stooped and taking the child's hand, called gently: "Come, Matihl: we may as well plod homeward, little one, our chances are over for to-day."

The child roused up and started on ahead, leading the old man along the silent, sunny streets, until they reached their humble abode.

A square, comfortless room, with a small cheap bed, and a few articles of broken furniture, prominent among which was a huge arm chair, made of some old fashioned wood, elaborately carved, and cushioned with tattered brocatelle, which in its day had been royal, both in tint and texture. Indeed, the old chair, despite its age and illusage was still a rather imposing object, and looked a good deal out of place in the squalid and poverty-stricken abode of the old rushseller.

The old man entered, and after depositing his bundle of rushes in one corner of the small room, threw himself down in the old chair with a heavy sigh.

"Another day," he murmured, "and not a penny, and the poor child half famished! Heaven pity us!"

In the meantime, little Matihl had crept to the hearth, and raking open the coals, she sat whimpering in a babyish way.

"What is it, little one?" called the old man.

"Oh, grandpa! I am so tired and so cold, and so very, hungry. If we only had some supper!"

By a kind of instinct he turned his sightless eyes toward the one window, through whose dingy panes the pomp and splendor of the closing day were visible, and his lips moved silently, as if asking help from a source more compassionate than man.

"Run down to the baker's, Matihl." he said, at last, his voice slow and hesitating, as if the resolution pained him, "and asked him to trust me for a loaf. I think I can raise enough to pay him tomorrow."

The child went off like a bird on the wing, her brown hair streaming behind her in disheveled masses; but in a few moments she returned, drooping and dispirited.

"He would't let me have it, grandpa," she sobbed, "and ordered me out of the shop for a beggar."

The old man made no answer, but leaned his head upon his hand, while the tears fell silently. The weary child soon sobbed herself to sleep. But still he sat there, in the purple twilight, silent and thinking of the past.

For even this poor, blind rush seller had his happy memories. There had been a day when he was young and strong, and as gallant a soldier, perhaps, as could be found in Rouen. His father was a wealthy and respectable citizen, and at his death he had looked forward to the possession of a handsome income. But when that event occured, he found to his dismay and astonishment that his father was a bankrupt. Too proud to remain in Rouen, he wandered off to the south of France. Here his wife died. Here, too, one fine day, when looking at a parade, a piece of artilery exploded and the poor man was blind for life.

But he still had one blessing left—an only son who was growing to manhood. The son married, and of this union the little Matihl was the offspring. When she was a baby in her mother's arms, her father went off to the Austrian wars, and in less than a month fell fatally wounded. His wife, too frail to endure the shock, soon followed her husband, and little Matihl and her blind grandfather were left alone in the world.

Actuated by the yearning, instinctive love of home which is deathless as the soul itself, they wandered back to Rouen. The quaint old city was unchanged; but in its streets were unfamiliar faces; and, led by his grandchild, the blind man found that he was as utterly unknown and forgotten in his native town as if he had never existed.

Friendless, homeless, and well nigh pennyless, yet too proud of heart to make himself known, he settled down in an humble quarter of the city, and took to selling rushes for a livelihood. A meager subsistence it brought him, but the poor man could do nothing better; and he must do something, for the paltry sum which accrued to him from the disposal of his household effects was very trifling.

And one sunny afternoon, strolling with his little guide, and amusing himself by listening to the idle chat of bystanders, he chanced upon a small crowd collected around the sale of some old books and second-hand furniture. The auctioneer had just put up an old chair, and was discanting quite volubly upon its rare merits.

"It was worth buying," he said, "as a relic if nothing more. It had belonged to the De Courcys, one of the best families in Rouen in their day, and had been handed down from one to another as a kind of heirloom."

The rushseller waited to hear no more. He arose and groping his way to the old chair, fell to passing his hands over its quaint carvings with a kind of caressing fondness. It was the same dear old chair, in which he had seen his father, and his grandfather before him, sit so often. With tears running down his furrowed cheeks he bought it back, glad to get it, though it took the last sou from his pocket. He had it conveyed to his poor lodgings; and those who noticed, wondered what the old rushseller wanted with the De Courcy chair.

And thus having spent the last of his little mite of money, he had nothing to fall back upon when his rushselling failed him, and poor little Matihl, as we have seen, was forced to go supperless to bed. She awoke in the morning with no prospect of breakfast. Her grandfather, worn out by hunger and anxiety, was still asleep. Noiselessly the little thing unbolted the door, and went out. The day was dawning grandly over quiet Rouen. The child went round to the window ledge to look at her pansies. There were two pretty purple things, with lustrous, golden heart.

An old market woman had given her the plant, and the child watched and nurtured it with a kind of adoration. Her pansy pot was the shrine at which she worshipped. Looking at the dewy blossoms, a sudden thought flashed upon her. What if she should break them off and run out and sell them! Surely they would bring enough to buy them some breakfast! But her lips quivered, and tears filled her eyes. It almost broke her heart to give up her pansies. But she was so hungry, and poor grandpa would have no breakfast. At this last thought she put out her hand resolutely and broke them off; then ran away as fast as she could.

At the corner of the market place she paused breathless. A fine gentleman was passing by, and extending the tiny brown hand that held the blossoms, she said timidly, "Will you please, sir, buy my pansies"

But he pushed on, well nigh brushing them from her grasp. The next passer was an old countryman, with a wagon filled with milk-cans rattling ahead of him. The child put out her blossoms and repeated her meek entreaty. The old man paused. His garden was overrun with such things; but the child's meek face touched him.

"Buy your pansies?" he said. "Why, bless your little heart, to be sure I will, if you want to sell 'em. What do you want for 'em?"

"Only to buy a loaf, sir. We are so hungry, grandpa and I."

"Give me the blossoms," he said, "I'll take 'em home to my little girl; and you come along, you poor, hungry, little birdie, and get a drink of fresh milk."

The child followed him eagerly, drinking the milk, and clutched at the wheaten roll he gave her. But before she had swallowed the second mouthful she paused, holding the bread in her hand.

"Why don't you eat?" he said.

"Grandpa," she half sobbed, "he's so hungry, too."

"Then, take this, continued the man, drawing his sleeves across his eyes, "and run home and buy him some breakfast."

He put a silver peice in her hand. She grasped it with dilating eyes.

"Heaven reward you!" she murmured, kissing his hand vehemently. Then, before he was aware of her motion, she had disappeared.

"Grandpa, grandpa," cried little Matihl, as she burst into the room, "see what I have sold my pansies for! we shall have breakfast now!"

The old man murmured a blessing, and strained the child to his breast.

"Granpa," the child continued, "you shan't be sick any more; it is because you're hungry. You shall have plenty o' breakfast now; I've sold my pansies, and—oh! where is the money? I threw it in the chair when I came in. Oh! it's gone—it's gone! It's slipped down behind the cushion," she said, examining it closely. "May I try to raise the cushion up and find it?"

"Yes, but don't hurt the old chair, Matihl," said the old man, anxiously.

The child ran her little fingers into every crevice, and at last she fell to working vigorously at the huge cushion.

It was covered with leather beneath the brocatelle, but it was decayed and rotten, and a vigorous tug from her nervous little hands broke loose with a crash.

"Oh, grandpa!" she cried, starting back in amazement, for, as it yielded, a glittering stream came flashing and tinkling to the floor.

The old man, hearing the sound, crossed over. A sudden light seemed to dawn upon him. He threw up his hands and cried, "Shut the door, Matihl, and tell me what they are like."

"Here's jewels, granpa," she said, in an awed whisper, "just like the Empress wore when she rode through Rouen that day—whole heaps of 'em, as bright as stars; and great piles of gold, and papers with Jacques de Courcy marked on 'em."

"Put them all back, Matihl," said the old man, "and then run down to the good priest and ask him to come here."

"But our breakfast, grandpa," said the child, pausing in the doorway.

"We can afford to wait a little while for that," replied the old man, smiling. "We shall never want for breakfast any more, little Matihl."

"This is a letter from Pierre de Courcy," said the priest, after a careful examination of the contents of the chair, "telling his only son, Jacques de Courcy, that these treasures were concealed in the chair, in order that, if fortune went against him, he might have something to fall back upon. But the chair seems to have passed from the family. Where can this Jacques de Courcy be."

"I am the man," said the old rushseller, proudly—"Jacques De Courcy, thank heaven!" After that day the market people missed them, and, passing the sunny nook where they had stayed so long, wondered what had become of them. If they had chanced to pass the ancestral villa, formerly occupied by the De Courcys they would have found them—the old man sitting in his garden and little Matihl tending her roses and pansies that grew along its borders, the happiest pair that could be found in the quiet, sunny old city.

Miscellaneous.

Swinging on the Gate.

ONE OF YOUNG LIFE'S SWEETEST EXPERIENCES.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead," who has never swung on a gate with a pretty girl? If there is such an unfortunate, I pity him from the innermost recesses of my heart—I pity him as one who has missed a sensation, one of the best of our imperfect natures!

I have swung that way with a great many girls in my time. I am going to swing some more if I get the chance—for if I do not I shall mourn for a lost opportunity.

Coming home from church of a "moony" night, bathed in the mellow light, a little hand clinging confidingly to your manly arm, and a pretty face bewitchingly closed to yours; bright eyes looking an utterable sweetness at you; ripered lips moving to enchanting small talk—celestial music to a man in love—you reach that well-remembered gate. You open it for her to pass in, but before she does that, something unsaid must be remembered, and she stops to retail that pretty gossip. You are hardly conscious of her words, but you are in that stage of the tender passion when her voice is the soul of music, and all you want is to keep her talking as long as you can.

The lamps are out in the house in front; the "old folks have retired to roost," and you have the field all to yourself.

At last she passes in after a certain concussive sound has taken place under her bonnet. You dream of your first stick of candy, of maple sugar, of Charlotte Russe, and all sorts of liquid and solid sweetness, and you think them stale, flat, and unprofitable, compared with that kiss.

Is she going to leave you, now that the gate is closed? Not if I know anything of female nature, and I have had something to say to confiding females, of all classes, and they are alike in this respect, that they delight in the company of a passable young man by moonlight; and in that they show their good taste. I have heard it said that there are females differently constituted, but I never met them, and am glad of it. I hope I never shall.

Something more to tell. She returns to the gate and leans upon it. Your lips are rather close to hers, and if you do not kiss her then I have no respect for you, unworthy as you are of the name of man. You talk about the moon, about Tom Fellows at sea, about the moon again, about the weather, about the sermon—not much—the moon again, Jenny Wade's bonnet; that horrible old maid, Miss Virginia June and her slanders; the weather again, the dance of the Knights Templar, the moon once more, with a slight sprinkling of kissing thrown in by way of spice. Some ancient persons of either sex may say that this is all very silly. Bah! You have done the same in your time, if you ever amounted to anything.

But all things must have an end, and partings must come. The lips cling together in a long parting kiss, and you go home, through the mellow light, full of poetic thoughts, as happy as a young man ever is in this world of duns and debtors. Let's have more of it—this swinging on the gate.

President Grant and Southern Soldiers.

From a gentleman who has intimate personal acquaintance with Gen. Grant we derive the information that the President is kindly inclined toward the South. Our informant tells us that he has frequently had from the President an expression of his feeling towards Gen'l Lee, the great southern leader, and that no word of acrimonious criticism, in conversations in which there was no need for disguise ever escaped the President's lips respecting our great southern leader, or the men who followed him through Virginia.

The President regarded Gen'l. Lee as a thoroughly conscientious man, as a very great man, and as a decidedly mistaken man; but he never has viewed him with bitterness, or hatred, or any other than those sentiments with which one great military leader may regard another great military leader, who differs with him in opinion and meets him in open battle. There is no doubt entertained by any honest man, who is well informed, that it was through the influence of Gen'l Grant's very obstinate and openly pronounced stand for the protection of Gen'l Lee and his followers, that Gen'l Lee and many other Confederate leaders in Virginia were saved from the trouble and annoyance of indictment

THE BENEFIT OF RAILWAYS.

What has buil. up the West? What has peopled it, developed it, and made it thrive and prosper? Her system of railroads. The pioneers of western immigration were men of foresight and practical sense. They knew very well that their vast prairies, rich and fertile as they are, were valuless without population. To secure this they began to build railroads. The result justified their sagacity.

Look at the city of Chicago. In a business point of view it is the city of the continent. In energy, enterprize and sagacity, it compares favorably with the most famous cities of ancient and modern times. We read with wonder of Palmyra springing suddenly from the desert, and controling the trade of the world. The stories of Venice and Amsterdam rising from the sea, and winning its richest commerce, fire the imagination; but Chicago in growth and capabilities surpasses them all. Within the lifetime of men who are still comparatively young and active in the pursuit of life, it has risen from the position of a wretched Indian village to be the inland city of the West, the centre of its growing commerce, and the rival of cities far older than herself, and endowed with infinitely greater natural capacities.

And how has this been accomplished? Simply because it makes trade, instead of waiting for trade to come to it. When an opening for business occurs it improves the chances. When there is no opening, a locomotive is bolted through to make one. In this respect it is difficult to determine whether Chicago has grown with the West, or the West grown with Chicago. One is a product and sequence of the other. It lays the entire country under contribution. It pushes its lines of railroads across the prairies, and anticipates the industry of the pioneers and the immigrant. With wonderous sagacity it discounts the labor of the millions of toilers of the Old World, whose eager eyes are turned toward the setting sun.

Now we hold what has been done by Chicago and for the West, can be done for this portion of the South. Indeed the same energy and enterprize—the same sagacity and foresight used and brought into full working operation in this genial and fertile portion of the Union can make us far outstrip the West in prosperity and power and greatness. And it is for this we are so earnestly advocating the railroad enterprize now being agitated before our people.

THE FARMER'S GRANGES.

An organization known as "The Granges of the Patrons of Husbandry" is rapidly spreading all over the country. It appears that the idea of the order was originally borrowed from an association of Scotch farmers in North Carolina, whose object was the purchase of supplies at wholesale and at first hands, and the cultivation of social relations among its members. It was not until the Spring of 1868 that the idea of these Scotch people first began to be known to the people of the West. Early in 1868, a "Grange" was organized at Itasca, Minn., and this was the first Grange organization in the United States, except the organic germ in North Carolina. At the end of 1871, the order had been introduced into Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois; but up to the close of '71 its entire number in the four States named is estimated at not over 75,000. Since the beginning of '72 its progress has been wonderful. In the four States where it then had a weak army of 75,000, its membership has increased to 450,000, "and still they come." The order has also been introduced into a large portion of the remaining States and some of the Territories. It is its prodigious growth, rapid advance, and general diffusion throughout the country that give so deep significance to this movement. It is already in active operation in 22 States, two or three Territories, and in the Canadas.

The question is often asked: Why is it, with all the natural advantages for developement and prosperity, the Albemarle region has not kept pace with sections far less favored? We answer, because the industry and prosperity of this, like all the Southern country, was blighted by slavery. The large plantation system was anti-commercial and unfavorable to manufactories. It discouraged railroads and did not invite population. All this is now changed. Let us have a railroad and this section will not only catch up, but will soon outstrip the North, the East and the West.

MARTIN V. B. GILBERT, Esq., formerly connected with the CAROLINIAN office as Foreman, has received the Republican nomination in Wake County to fill the vacancy in the Legislature occasioned by the resignation of R. C.

Before another number of the NORTH CAROLINIAN will be issued the Ninety Seventh Auniversary of our National Independence will have "come and gone." Soon this nation will be an hundred years old! What a history it has had and what a grand vindication of the wisdom and judgement of the patriot spirits that founded it! Actuated by the purest of motives, and laying the foundations broad and deep on the pillars of Eternal Justice, they felt that they could not fail. And they did not. The grand principles they boldly proclaimed will live for all time. So long as the people are true to them, self government will prove a success, and a "government of the people, for the people and by the people" will not perish from the earth.

We call attention to the account elsewhere published of the general equality movement in Louisiana, engaged in and fully endorsed by Gen. BEAUREGARD and other late Confederate leaders. Things are working. First came LONGSTREET and then MOSBY. And what a howl rang through the Democratic camp! But now comes another—the man who the Richmond Examiner praised as the "peerless BEAUREGARD." He has signed the address advocating Republican Principles!! Look out for any amount of slander on him.

New Books, Periodicals, &c.

THE ALDINE for July is a capital number, both as regards its Art and its Literature. It opens with a full-page illustration, printed in tints, and entitled "Catch Him!" It represents two children, the elder of whom, a girl, is holding her little brother up to a rosebush, on which, a butterfly is about to alight. This is one of Mr. John S. Davis's studies of child life, and a very excellent one, too. "Moonlight on the Shenandoah" is the title of the first of a series of five Illustrations drawn by Mr. J. D. Woodward, whose themes are the scenery of the Old Dominion, which is chiefly selected in this instance from the region around Harper's Ferry and the Shenandoah. They are picturesque and beautiful. Mrs. Eliza Greatorex transports us back to Old New York, in her spirited sketch of "Hell Gate Ferry," which is one of the most characteristic local drawings ever contributed to THE ALDINE. "A Dainty Bit," after Otto Meyer, is delicious enough to provoke an epicure and a lover. Other figure-pieces are the "Morning Bath," by H. Werner, and "You Naughty Children!" by A. Gable There is a fine architectural view of "The Frauenkirche, Nuremberg;" a woodland scene entitled "The Onset," by C. Kroner; and a weird picture of a bittern, as we suppose, standing alone in a desolate marsh upon which the moon is just rising. This, which is after Dahl, is a most poetic and impressive realization of "Solitude." The Literature of THE ALDINE is always as excellent as, and generally more varied, than the literature of any other American magazine. There are in the present number four good stories: "Sugaring Off," a study of New England life, by Mrs. H. G. Rowe, whose name is new to us; "Return in Peace," a study of old home life in the State of New York, by Lucy Ellen Guernseay; "The Comet," by Erckmann-Chatrian; and "The Turkish Slipper," by Maurice Hartmann. The more solid articles are a readable editorial on "The Old Dominion," apropos to Mr. Woodward's illustrations; another on "The Frauenkirche, Nuremberg;" and "A Life's Romance," a brief memoir of The Countess Potozki. The poems are "The Song in the Dark," by Mary E. Bradley; and "Sebastians at Supper," by Margaret J. Preston. Music, Art, and Literature are intelligently and independently discussed. Altogether the number is remarkably good. Subscription price $5.00, including Chromos "Village Belle" and "Crossing the Moor." James Sutton & Co., Publishers, 58 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

The July number of LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, which forms the opening issue of a new volume, contains the initial chapters of a charming narrative of travel entitled "The New Hyperon," profusely illustrated by Gustave Dore. This record of a journey from Paris to the Rhine gives promise of much graphic and humorous writing. The pictures which embelish it, coming as they do from Dore's pencil, cannot fail to yield a feast of art. "From Philadelphia to Baltimore," by Robert Morris Copeland, is an illustrated article descriptive of the beautiful scenery along one of our most important routes to travel. "With the American Ambulance Corps in Paris," by Ralph Keeler, is an interesting paper, which no American can read without experiencing a feeling of just pride "Our Home in the Tyrol," by Margarett, is continued in the present number of the Magazine. It well maintains the interest and attraction which it exhibited in the beginning. Will Wallace Harney's contribution, entitled "Strange Sea Industries and Adventures," is full of information of a novel kind, and abounds in anecdotes as exciting as they are truthful. "Remarkable passages in Shelley's Early History," by January Searle, is a paper that will be read with interest on account of the light which it sheds upon the youth of one genious of English poetry. In the department of fiction the most prominent contributions to this issue are the continuation of Mr. Black's serial novel, "A Princess of Thule." and the conclusion of Mrs. Rebecca Hardling Davis's story, "Berrytown." The poetry of the number is notably good, particularaly a charming little legend from the pen of Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, entitled "Francescar's Worship." "Our Monthly Gossip" exhibits its characteristic features.

ECLECTIC MAGAZINE.—The Eclectic for July is on our table and probably the most brilliant number of any magazine that has been issued during the year. It has contributions from writers no less eminent than Professor Tyndall, who writes of "Niagara Falls;" Professor Huxley, who, discusses the "Problems of the Deep Sea;" Prof. Max Muller, whose "Lectures on Mr. Darwin's Philosophy of Language" are the most important of recent attacks on "Darwin ism;" and Mr. Tom Hughes, who treats in a most suggestive manner of the various "Problems of Civilization,"

Other valuable papers are: "Charles, Comte de Montalembert;" "Louis Napoleon, Painted by a Contemporary;" Homespun Songs," by Sam Slick, Jr.; "Malingering;" "Northumberland House and the Percys;" "Some One Pays;" "Too Soon; and "Capt. M. F. Maury." There is a fine potrait of Captain Maury, and the Editoral Departments have the customary interest and variety.

This number begins a new volume, and offers a favorable opportunity to subscribe.

Published by E. R. PELTON, 108 Fulton Street, New York. Terms, $5 a year; two copies, $9. Single number, 45 cents.

THE PREVALENCE OF CRIME.—The cry from all parts of the Country of Murder, Robbery, and the other lesser crimes has induced many of our best thinkers to examine into the cause of crime. What steps are best to be taken for its prevention, and whether Capital Punishment is beneficial as a preventitive, etc.

Dr. John Stolz, of Chicago, has introduced his ideas in a work entitled Murder, Capital Punishment and the Law.

The Book really is a sensation, it strikes to the very bottom of the cause of Crime. It will undoubtedly cause some of our best and most highly influential families to stare in wonderment at the truths laid bare. Our most humane and Christian people should look deeper than they have recently been doing. The work is a suitable one for every family. It is very interesting, being illustrated by facts brought forth in connection with the things that lead and induce our people to commit crime. The book is handsomely printed and bound by the UNION PUBLISHING COMPANY, and Illustrated, the frontispiece being a hand. some illustration of the execution of the Hero Martyr of the American Revolution, Capt. Nathan Hale. The work is to be sold by subscription only.

Useful and entertaining literature is one of the great desires of the day, for we are proverbially a reading and a thinking people. Among the quantities of publications received by us none are better than DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE. The July issue to hand is excellent in its line, and for a Family Magazine unsurpassed; its inducements of premiums to subscribers, delivered at the time of subscribing, are a marvel of How to do it and succeed. $3 yearly. Published by W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 838 Broadway, New York.

DEMOREST'S YOUNG AEERICA, for Boys and Girls, One Dollar per year. The July number has been received, and is fully up to the standard of excellence for our juvenile friends. Published at 838 Broadway, New York, by W. JENNINGS DEMOREST.

A Danbury young man, who was once a clerk, lately went on to a farm to work. The first night in his new position he was detailed to remove a calf from the apartment of its parents to another shed; and while engaged, as thousands have been before him, in shoving the contrary beast along, the mother reached under the tails of his coat with her horns and suddenly lifted him up against the roof of the building with a force that threatened to shatter every bone in his body. The first thing he done on returning to earth was to rub himself, the next thing was to throw up his place. He said he didn't doubt that agriculture was a noble pursuit, and that the farmer needed an assistant in the discharge of his manufacturious duties, but he didn't believe he was designed for making skylights in cow-sheds.

Nags Head.

ITS SPLENDID SCENERY AND HEALTHY LOCATION. THE NEW HOTEL, ETC.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

I have just returned from that glorious "place by the sea"—Nags Head, and as I know many of your readers would like to have an outline picture of that place as it is, I will endeavor to accommodate them.

Naturally Nags Head is the same as heretofore; on one hand the great Atlantic is forever moaning and rolling on the sandy shore; on the other, the blue waters of the Albemarle wave peacefully and silently along. To the south stretch far away the yellow, bare sandbanks, while to the north are the great hills of sand, some bald and utterly bare of vegetation, others covered and wrapped in the shining and glittering green of live oak forests.

I can imagine nothing more picturesque and sublime than these scenes at sunset, on a clear, calm day, viewed from the top of "Engagement Hill" or "Jocky Ridge." Many happy hours have I spent on these hills, looking at the little white-winged boats gliding over the sound on one hand, or the great ships and steamers plunging through the billowy sea on the other.

There is probably no healthier place in North Carolina than the Nags Head banks. There can be no malaria on these bare, clean shores, fanned by winds from the broad ocean, and, if ordinary prudence is exercised in eating and in the general care of the person, I cannot understand how disease of any kind can be contracted.

The fish at Nags Head are always in abundance, and of the very best kind. Oysters also and clams are taken in great quantities in the sounds below. Fruits also and vegetables of many kinds are raised in abundance on some parts of the banks, but particularly on Roanoke Island, which is only three miles distant. During the season that the hotels are open, boats are continually arriving with figs, peaches, apples, grapes, melons and many other kinds of fruits and vegetables for sale. Speaking from the experience of many years, I can say that I have never been at so healthy a place, and one where there is so little need for the doctor's service.

But I must tell your readers of what has been done at Nags Head since the last season in the ways of building and other improvements. First and foremost is the new Hotel now being completed by Messrs J. Clark Perry and John L. Wood. When I left the Hotel it was finished except some little work upon the doors and windows which will be fully completed in another week. The "Nags Head Hotel", (or Sir Walter Raleigh House as I should prefer to call it), is 175 feet long by 28 feet wide, 3 stories high. It is situated on the sound shore, about 50 yards from the waters edge. Every one of the stories has a piazza 9 feet wide entirely around it. On the first floor at the South end, is the Dining Room 28 feet wide (the width of the house) and 76 feet long. This room has at least 20 windows in it, opening on the piazzas on three sides, which will supply it with plenty of light and air; it has also I think 6 doors, 2 opening on the East and 2 on the West piazza and 2 into the ladies parlor, a room about 28 feet square which adjoins it on the North. Next to the parlor is the Hall, about 20 by 28 feet in size, and next comes the offices. The ballance of the first floor is made into bed-rooms 12 by 14 feet. The two stories above are divided into chambers all exactly the same size as those on the first floor, of which there are 26 on each floor. The kitchen is connected by a covered way with the main building, at its south east corner. It is a large and convenient building 2 stories high, the upper story being divided into four rooms for the servants. From both the 2nd and 3d piazzas on the East, the ocean and the houses on the beach are in plain view.

A pier about 6 feet wide extends from the West piazza out into the sound about 500 yards, the head of the pier being in 6 or 7 feet water. At this pier the boats will land both passengers and freight. A car is already on the pier for the purpose of taking up the furniture and other freight as soon as it is landed. This pier is not only a matter of great convenience but it will be a delightful morning and afternoon walk. The pier-head is about 30 feet square, and for about 100 yards the pier is about 12 feet wide; this is for the convenience of landing horses from the boat. From the wide part of the pier the horses will walk down an incline plane into the sound where it is shallow. At the foot of the pier is a store and bar room, adjoining which will be billiard rooms, above which will be sleeping rooms. The proprietors are arranging to erect convenient bathing houses both for the ocean and sound. Five or six wells have already been dug and an ice house is about to be made in the sand hill near by.

In the dining room there are 12 or 15 tables calculated to seat about 10 persons each, which is a very pleasant arrangement by which families can be seated together.

Messrs Perry and Wood deserve to be successful, and I sincerely hope that they may reap a rich reward for their very laudable enterprize.

PETREL.

Early Peaches.—North Carolina Ahead.

We learn that Mr. Garrett S. Bellis, at Littleton, Halifax county in this State, has a 300 acre peach orchard of which one-half the trees are of a new variety, called the Beatrice peach, recently imported from England, and which are nearly one month earlier than any other kind raised in this country. They are of a very delicious flavor, highly colored, the best of shippers and are ready for market by the middle of June. This is the first bearing year of Mr. Bellis' orchard which promises a great yield as well as a fortune for the lucky owner, who is an enterprising Quaker gentleman from the old Key-stone State, and who has selected Littleton for his home, where he is highly esteemed. We are informed that there is at present but one other orchard of this variety of peach in the United States, and which is located in Maryland, but not as yet in a bearing state. We hope our people will engage more extensively in the fruit-raising business, as it yields a better return for the labor than most other crops and in this particular our climate and soil can not be surpassed.—Times.

The Newbern Times says: We notice that a consignment of broom corn from Hyde county was received yesterday, by Messrs Rountree & Webb, of of this city, for shipment to the New York house of Webb & Rountree in order to try the Northern Market. We are not aware of any shipment of this staple being made heretofore from this section of the State, though we are cognizant of the fact that the article has been imported from the North here very extensively, and that we have been chiefly dependant upon the Northern States for this production.

Pennsylvania spends $8,500,000 for public schools, $1,000,000 less than New York, but more than any other State.

PERRY DAVIS'

PAIN-KILLER.

HAS been tested in every variety of climate, and by almost every nation known to Americans. It is the constant companion and unestimable friend of the missionionary and the traveler on the sea or land, and no one should travel on our Lakes or Rivers, without it.

Since the PAIN-KILLER was first introduced, and met with such extensive sale, many Liniments, Relefe, Panaceas, and other Remedies have been offered to the public, but not one of them has attained the truly enviable standing of the PAIN-KILLER.

WHY IS THIS SO?

It is because DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER is what it claims to be a Reliever of Pain.

ITS MERITS ARE UNSURPASSED.

If you are suffering from INTERNAL PAIN, Twenty to Thirty Drops in a Little Water will almost instantly cure you. There is nothing to equal it for Colic, Cramps, Spasms, Heart-burn, Diarrhea, Dysentry, Flux, Wind in the Bowels, Sour Stomache, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, &c.

In sections of the country where prevails, there is no remedy held in greater esteem. Persons traveling should keep it by them. A few drops, in water, will prevent sickness or bowl troubles from change of water.

CURE CHOLERA WHEN ALL OTHER REMEDIES FAIL.

When used Externally, as a Liniment, nothing gives quicker ease in Burns' Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Stings from Insects, and Scalds. It removes the fire, and the wound heals like ordinary sores. Those suffering with RHEUMATISM, GOUT, or NEURALIGA, if not a positive cure, they find the Pain-Killer gives them relief when no other remedy will.

IT GIVES INSTANT RELIEF FROM ACHING TEETH.

Every House-Keeper should keep it at hand, and apply it on the first attack of any Pain. It will give satisfactory relief, and save hours of suffering.

Do not trifle with yourselves by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for and get the genuine PAIN-KILLER, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.

☞ Directions accompany each Bottle. Price 25 cts., and 50 cts., and $1 per Bottle.

WEDNESDAY, JULY, 2, 1873.

TO NORTHERN VISITORS.—Elizabeth City is 50 miles South East of Norfolk, Va. Parties coming here from the North should take passage on the Bay line Steamers which leave Baltimore at 4 P. M. every evening, and arrive at Portsmouth the next morning in time to connect with the Elizabeth City Steamers daily.

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

Bingham School.
Health and Home.
Notice in Bankruptcy.
American Agriculturist.

Local and Personal.

The examination of Teachers for this County will commence to-morrow.

Pears, apples, cucumbers, green corn and blackberries are in our market.

The Spring term of the several schools in our City have closed for the Summer vacation.

There will be a Trot at the "Albemarle Park" on the Fair Grounds on Friday at 4 o'clock P. M.

"Inquirer" wants to know when the first railroad was completed in the United States? We answer in 1833.

There is a difference between starting a paper and establishing one. It is easy to do the one, but to do the other is what takes the pluck.

The Baptists held their Union Meeting in the Church at this place on Friday Saturday and Sunday last. They had an interesting and profitable time.

Capt. M. C. McNAMARA of Plymouth, and JOHN B. CHESSON Esq., of Washington county and RICHARD CLAYTON Esq., of Edenton were in town this week.

The longest days are already passed—ending on the 29th ult., the sun rising at 4:42 and setting at 7:18, making the time between suns fourteen hours and thirty-six minutes.

The Steamer "Harbenger" makes her first trip to Nags Head on Saturday. She is now a magnificent boat and we are sure the people all along the line of her route will appreciate the efforts of the Company to accomodate them.

The subject of quick and cheap transportation of farm products to a paying market constitutes a live question at this time. Relating, as it does, to the support and happiness of innumerable human lives, it cannot be without great interest.

In our local notice last week of the change in the management of the "Alexina House" at Nag's Head the types made us announce C. W. DAVIS. It should be Col. W. C. DAVIS, the popular proprietor of the Saloon at the "Albemarle House."

In answer to the inquiries made as to how the vacancy occasioned by a resignation of a County Commissioner is filled, we would say that by a special act of the Legislature, ratified in 1868, the duty of filling the vacancy devolves upon the Governor.

There is hidden wealth enough in this Albemarle section of North Carolina, once developed, to make business for a railroad and for many more steamers and vessels than now ply our waters. A railroad will aid in developing the vast business and thus make employment for thousands where now there is only labor for one.

In response to the earnest request of the Managers of the Normal Institute at Belvidere for the Editor of the NORTH CAROLINIAN to deliver an Address before the same, he takes this occasion to say that he will endeavor to do so on Thursday evening (8 o'clock P. M.) of next week, being the 10th, inst.

Let all who expect to teach School in any of the counties East of the Sound during the coming Fall or Winter make arrangements to attend the Normal Institute at Belvidere, commencing on Monday next. There is not a teacher but what can be benefited by a few weeks attendance—be better prepared to perform the high duties required in the school room. Let all attend.

We are pained to hear of the death of our old friend JEPTHA WHITE, of Belvidere, which occurred very suddenly on Saturday night last. He was a prominent man in Perquimans county, having faithfully served in the Legislature and as Commissioner. He stood deservedly high in society, and in the community in which he lived he was respected and loved by all. He was 59 years of age.

The indications are now that the celebration at this place on the Fourth will be a large one. We learn that there will be numbers here from Plymouth, Edenton, and neighboring towns. A number of speakers have been invited and the intention is to celebrate the day in an appropriate and becoming manner. As it is the political Sabbath of a free people let it be celebrated from year to year until the "end of time."

Elizabeth City has a sensation and why shouldn't it have one? This time it is a Ghost, and makes its appearance in the day time and in the form of a little boy. It was first seen by a little girl on Monday out in a lot near the Southern part of the City. Since that time the place has been visited by hundreds, a few asserting that they can plainly see it, but the rest are unable to discern anything. It is creating quite a sensation. As we have no faith in Ghosts or Goblins we conclude, if anything unusual was seen, it was either an optical illusion or was caused by a disordered imagination.

The town of Hertford very narrowly escaped what might have been a very disastrous fire on Friday morning last. At about 4 o'clock A. M. a fire was discovered under that portion of the Drug Store of H. C. STOKES in which the kerosene oil is kept. A few minutes later an explosion and firejng of the store and surrounding buildings must have taken place. It was evidently the work of an incendiary.

The railroad enterprize has progressed as far as it can until action is taken by the counties. On Monday next the Commissioners meet. If they submit the question to the people, as we hope and believe they will, all the facts bearing on the question will then be fully and fairly presented, and if a favorable vote is received the enterprize will be pushed vigorously forward.

The communication of "A Laboring Man" contains many good points, but its great length makes it impossible for us to publish it. We have always recognized the industrial class—the laboring men of the country as the basis of all its wealth and prosperity. We recognize the fact that we are almost wholly dependent upon them for every article we use, and we do not hesitate to declare that the true glory of a nation is the full recognition of the rights and honor of its working people. And when we hear any one speak sneeringly of a mechanic or a laboring man we immediately consider that person to be unfriendly to the true interest of his country and race.

We need better transportation to and from this city. Travelers, whether on pleasure or business, count the time spent in getting to and from a place. Those routes affording certainty as well as speed in transit are the best patronized and more certain to secure the travel. A railroad is our present great need. It would bring people and the result would be such a development of all this country as to make business to keep the boats and sailing vessels profitably engaged all the time. It always has been so—it always will be, that railroads make their business and when located in the vicinity of canals and navigable rivers they largely increase the business of both.

LOCAL POET-FOLIE.

How to boil a tongue—drink scalding coffee. How to cool it—take ice. A fast friend—the telegraph. The rovar material—baby. How to make a tall man short—ask him to lend you $5. A religious insect—the mosquito. He is preying all the time. Great revivalists—some preachers, because at the close of every sermon there is a great awakening. The oldest lunatic on record—time out of mind. A popular drawing—a salary.

Business Locals.

BRODRICK & SMITH has just received a new stock of slippers.

For anything you want in the Dry Goods, Notions, Hats, Boots or Shoe line go to FOWLERS.

The best and cheapest place to purchase goods—wholesale or retail in the city of Norfolk is at the large house of LOWENBERG & JACOBS, 22 & 24 Market Square.

We see that PROCTER & GAMBLE'S EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city, its quality we know is superior, and being nicely perfumed we are not surprised that consumers prefer it and that it has a large sale.

A Bankrupt Court the Only Safety.

Another Homestead case has recently come up before the State Supreme Court, or rather before Associate Justice Reade, who decided in favor of its constitutionality as a bar against "old debts," which is causing some discussion among the newspapers.—Judges Pearson and Boyden were not present, who, it is understood, as well as Judge Brooks of the United States District Court, do not concur in the views of Judge Reade's decision. The Raleigh News editor seems to have given the Homestead and Bankrupt laws much consideration, and while desiring that the Homestead might hold and afford reliable protection, is forced by the provisions contained in the Constitution of the United States to concur in the decision of the Federal Court in the Georgia case, sustained by the opinions of Messrs. Pearson, Boyden and Brooks, and which effectually nullifies the retroactive feature of the North Carolina Homestead law.

The News says:

"The following language of the Supreme Court of the United States endorses Pearson, and shows that Mr. Justice Reade's reasoning to sustain Hill vs. Kessler rests on fallacious grounds, and will not stand the test before the highest appellate jurisdiction in the land:

"'The legal remedies for the enforcement of a contract, which belong to it, at the time and place where belong it is made, ARE A PART OF ITS OBLIGATION. A State may change them provided the change involve no impairment of a substantial right.'

"If the remedy is a part of the obligation of the contract, surely a change of the remedy by which that contract cannot be enforced will be held by the Supreme Court of the United States an impairment of the obligation of contracts and of a substantial right.

"Therefore, notwithstanding Mr. Justice Reade's opinion, we feel positively assured that he is in a grave error on this point; and however much we may desire the contrary, yet we would be false to our convictions and false to our duty to the public if we did not advise them, that in our opinion, the North Carolina Homestead law is not safe, and will not be upheld by the Supreme Court of the nation."

It is a pity that the "Homestead" will not afford the protection desired and the only safety is in the Bankrupt Court, which secures to the debtors the measure of the Homestead allowance. As the Bankrupt law, most likely, will be materially changed, or abolished, by the next Congress, those who would seek its provisions have no time to lose.—Statesville American.

A horse thief named Hagan was arrested on Wednesday last at Owingsville, and has made confession, in which he says he is a member of an organized band, whose operations extend through Pendleton, Scott, Harrison, Clarke, Bourbon, Nicholas, Bath, Montgomery, Fleming, and Lewis Counties, and through Virginia into North Carolina, their object being horse stealing and other outrages upon the inhabitants of the districts mentioned. In his confession he gives the names of some 80 persons known to him as members of the gang. One result of this statement has been the arrest of one Sotterfield, a notorious character, on the charge of setting fire to buildings in Owingsville at the time of the recent conflagration there.—*N. The Bane of Georgia Farming.

Impatience to get rich and a consequent desire to emigrate is the bane of our agriculture. Visit the home of a Georgia farmer and if you find the front gate nailed up and are compelled to climb over the fence to get into his yard, if on entering the house you find a cotton basket in the front porch and two or three lazy hound dogs lying before the door, you may feel certain that when you enter into conversation with the owner that you will find him complaining about "free nigger labor" and crushing the country and all in it, as "gone to the devil." He will tell you that "a man can't make nothing" farming in this country, and if he could find a sale for his place he would sell out and move to Texas. You go into the house, and after a little while you are introduced to his wife. Her face is red with cooking, and her appearance is haggard and careworn. She tells you that she is doing her own cooking and washing; that it is so difficult to get servants, that she had concluded to do her own work. Of course this lady has no time to visit her neighbors, as she is unhappy and discontented, and when her husband talks about selling out, she expresses no dissent, feeling that her life cannot be more miserable than where she is. Ask the owner if his is a good fruit country, and he tells you it is no use to plant fruit trees, that the niggers will steal all your fruit; does he raise many chickens, and he tells you hawks are so bad that his wife was about giving up chicken raising; "I see you are buying corn," and he replies, "that it don't pay to raise corn in this country." "The fact is," he continues, "we hardly feel settled here. I have been trying to sell out for the last two years, but can't find anybody to buy my land."

Now take the other side of the picture. The writer of this article visited a gentleman a few days since, who, to his certain knowledge, settled a few years ago on the poorest spot of land in all this country. As he entered the gate he saw flowers and blue grass, and swings for his children. To the left was a hot house of rare plants, a fine orchard, with clover patches and vegetable garden, filled with everything that is raised in this climate, from the vegetable oyster to the blue stem collard. In the middle of the garden was a scuppernong vine that will afford grapes enough this season for a battalion. This man did not want to move. He thought this was a fine country, in fact, the best farming country under the sun. He asked us to dinner, after giving us a good old-fashioned julep, and we dined heartily on the products of his farm. Even the pigeons that made the pie were raised on the place, and his lovely daughter kept off the flies while we dined. The great misfortune of our farmers is that most of them are working their farms like a California miner would work his mine to get the greatest possible present income out of it and then to move somewhere else. He plants no fruit trees, because he can't get fruit the first year. He raises no stock for the same reason. He plants no hedges, he digs no drains, he recuperates no wasts places, because he can't get any money next fall for all this work.—Atlanta Herald.

One Cause of Consumption.

Dr. MacCormac of Belfast, Ireland, is the author of a work on pulmonary consumption, recently published by the Longmans, London, and which has attracted considerable notice. According to Dr. MacCormac, induced consumption —as distinguished from that which is hereditary—has its origin in rebreathing expired air. Persons of a delicate constitution or organization should, he says, sleep alone, and, if possible, in spacious rooms, thus insuring a larger supply of pure uncontaminated air; and the window sash should also invariably be slightly raised on retiring. When the dormitory is small, if not carefully ventilated, oxygen, the essential element that supports life, is quickly exhausted, and the individual takes back into the lungs exabonic acid gas, which is so destructive of life—the whole system becoming deranged, the air-cells ulcerating, and, with the destruction of these, the whole bronchial region falling into diseases.

Vegetable Enemies.

To destroy bugs on squash or cucumber vines, dissolve a teaspoonful of saltpetre in a pailful of water, put one pint of this around each hill, shaping the earth so that it will not spread much, and the thing is done. Use more saltpetre if you can afford it—it is good for vegetables but death to animal life. The bugs burrow in the earth at night and fail to rise in the morning. It is also good to kill the "grub" in peach trees—only use twice as much, say a quart or two to each tree. There was not a yellow or blistered leaf on twelve or fifteen trees to which it was applied last season. No danger of killing any vegetable with it—a concentrated solution applied to beans make them grow wonderfully.

A wrinkle in the Age of Horses.

A short time ago we met a gentleman from Illinois who gave us a piece of information in regard to ascertaining the age of a horse after he or she had passed the ninth year, which was new to us, and will be, we are sure, to most of our readers. It is this: After the horse is nine years old a wrinkle comes on the eyelid at the upper corner of the lower lid, and every year thereafter he has one well defined wrinkle for each year over nine. If for instance a horse has three wrinkles he is twelve, if he has four he is thirteen. Add the number of wrinkles to nine and you will get it. So says the gentleman, and he is confident it will never fail. As a good many people have horses over nine it is easily tried. If true, the horse dentist must give up his trade.—Field and Fireside.

BANKRUPTCY.

THE FIFTY PER CENT. CLAUSE.

As there seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to the effect of the provision of the Bankrupt Act, commonly called the 50 per cent. clause, we publish the following extracts from the Act:

The second clause of the thirty-third section as amended by the Act of July 27, 1868, provides "that no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate upon which he shall be liable as the principal debtor, unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom he shall have become liable as principal debtor, and who shall have proved their claims, filed in the case at or before the time of hearing of the application for discharge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled—that the provision of the second clause of the thirty-third section of said act as amended by the first section of an act in amendment thereof, approved July 27th, 1868, shall not apply to those debts from which the bankrupt seeks a discharge which were contracted prior to January 1st, 1869.

The true meaning is not that a bankrupt must be able to pay fifty per cent of all the debts, before he can obtain a discharge, as many believe; but that his estate, in the hands of his assignee, at the time of the discharge, must be equal, to fifty per cent. of the amount of the debts.

1. That he owes as principal;

2. That have been proved against his estate in bankruptcy; and

3. That he has contracted since the 31st day of December, 1868.

Or, if a majority in number and value of those who have proved their debts, to whom the bankrupt is indebted as principal, on debts contracted subsequent to Dec., 31, 1868, consent in writing to the discharge—such bankrupt may be discharged forever from all his debts.

If a debtor, owing three thousand dollars as principal, twenty-five hundred of which indebtedness was contracted prior to January 1, 1869, and five hundred subsequent to that time, files his petition in bankruptcy, and all his creditors prove against him, and there are no assets in the hands of the assignee, the petitioner will be entitled to a discharge; but it will be a bar only to the debts contracted prior to January 1, 1869.—If no creditors prove, the discharge will be good against all debts, whether contracted before or after January 1, 1869.

The practical effect in bankruptcy cases generally is, that creditors fail to prove their debts, finding it ordinarily unprofitable. They have had, in a large majority of instances, heretofore the trouble and expense of making proofs, without receiving any return. The 50 per cent. bugbear, therefore when viewed in the light of the law and common-sense, disappears.

EXEMPTIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

The exemptions under the 14th section of the Bankrupt Act are as follows:

1. Household and kitchen furniture to an amount not exceeding $500.00

2. Wearing apparel for Bankrupt and family.

3. Uniform, &c., if he has been a soldier in the United States Army.

4. Personal property of the value of $600.00 to be selected by the Bankrupt.

5. A Homestead and the dwelling and buildings used therewith, not exceeding in value the sum of $1000.00; or in lieu thereof, any lot in any city, town or village not exceeding in value the sum of $1000.00.

6. The reversionary interest in the Homestead lands.

In laying off the Exemptions in some Districts, the Assignees are ordered to accept, and abide by, any assignment of a homestead which has been made by a Sheriff under the State laws; or which has been assigned upon the application of a debtor in accordance with the laws of North Carolina. Where no such assignment of homestead has been made, the assignee will proceed to set apart such homestead, and make the other exemptions according to the rules of the bankrupt Court.

The report of such exemptions when made by the assignee can be excepted to by the bankrupt or by any creditor, within twenty days after the allotment of such exempt property.

EFFECT OF THE DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY UPON JUDGMENT.

It is the opinion of many of our best lawyers that the discharge in bankruptcy, discharges judgment debts existing against the bankrupt at the time of filing his petition, and that therefore the liens existing by virtue of such judgments, upon homesteads are wiped out, and cannot afterwards be enforced. In fine, that the practical effect of the discharge, is to leave a man, whose homestead was encumbered by judgments, free from all his debts, of every nature, and the owner in fee simple of such homestead.

Again many lawyers, equally prominent in the profession, are of opinion that such will not be the effect of the discharge. That the homestead, will still be liable under the judgments and that when it determines under our State laws, the judgment creditor may enforce his lien and collect his debts.

To place this matter beyond doubt, the following rule has been adopted for the benefit of petitioners who are not willing to run any risk.

That the petitioning debtor may file his petition in the District Court, addressed to Hon. Geo. W. Brooks, asking that the judgment creditor, or creditors, show cause why the liens existing in pursuance of their judgments should not be adjusted by said court, and their present value ascertain and fixed, and the amount when so ascertained, to be made the true value of such lien or liens by the decree or judgment of said District Court, in bankruptcy.
